

TO: Parents/Guardians of AP Human Geography

FROM: Mr. Grether

Thank you for the opportunity to work with your student this year. We are a team in his/her education; therefore, it is important that you know the expectations I have for this course. Please review the course syllabus, also available on APHuG.MrGrether.com , with your student. Students will need to access their assignments via classroom.Google.com . They should have an account, but if not, they need to contact me as soon as possible. If they do not have computer access at home, they can always use the media center's computer lab or the local library.

In addition, each student is to plan to take the AP Human Geography Exam on Friday, May 15th, 2015. More information will come from Student Services as to how and when to sign up for and pay for the exam.

Again, thank you for your support. If, at any time, you have a question, please contact me at mgrether@wcpss.net and I will be happy to answer your questions.

My student and I have read over the syllabus and understand the requirements of the course. We understand that this course is a college level course, with college level reading, work and test requirements. We understand that technology and internet related activities are at the core of the instruction and that technology related out of class assignments will be required weekly. We understand some assignments will require "field work" outside-of-home locations. We understand the the tests are aimed at preparation for the AP Exam, with project opportunities to allow students to further demonstrate mastery. We understand that this course will be addressing college level content including emotionally charged topics related to race, disease, gender roles, drug trade, modern slave trade, genocide, illegal migration, poverty, religion and conflicts. We understand that these issues will be handled by seeking to fairly present all sides and letting the students draw conclusions.

I understand that if my student is not able to complete an assignment due to technology failure (printer out-of-ink, no Internet connection etc.) I must provide a written and signed statement to allow full credit on a late assignment.
